A Soldier Speaks

At last we are pleased to have received a contribution from one of our boys in the Armed Forces.

Here is what Bernie writes: —

KEEP THEM STRONG

In the clouded moonlight, gazing far over the horizon, a khaki-clad boy stands still. He watches in the quiet night from the West Coast, the Mountains, the Prairies, or from the Atlantic shore.

Above, a silver winged plane soars hurriedly — there is our lad dressed in blue. Far away a ship of war battles a stormy sea — again he watches, now a sailor.

All over the world there is a young man who does his bit to guard and defend all that he loved, that his folks loved, and that you love.

He might be your father, your husband, brother, or sweetheart. And every day, whatever he does, wherever he goes, you alone are in his thoughts. His thoughts travel along with the sun, the clouds in the sky, and the waves of the ocean, to the place where he left you, his folks and his friends.

Home, in his memories, is not only that house, or street, or room. Home for him means everything: what he did, where he went, and what he planned.

Many Lith. boys are in Canada's Armed Forces: on the battle fields of Europe, in the Pacific, or still in Canada. Every one of them fights and guards.

People everywhere are doing a great job of keeping us happy. Nothing is more pleasant, when one is away from home, than to find in a strange town or city a place where one can spend free hours amongst people who understand him and do everything to help him out of his doldrums of despondency. Then, friends from our home towns do their best to keep up our morale with letters and parcels. There is nothing we look forward to with more pleasure than letters from home keeping us posted on activities there.

Soon the day will come when we'll return home, bearing Victory with us. At that time we'll be more than grateful to all those strangers who helped us through our difficult days, and to you too!

When we do come back, we want to find the same community as before; the same clubs and choruses. And it is YOUR job to keep them thus for us. We boys sure miss all the activities and work we used to enjoy. It seems to me that if a club, or chorus, or the English Page weakens, you are forgetting us. Strange, isn't it? But that's the way I feel; and I believe many others of us feel the same way.

We understand that you are short-handed now, and therefore the work is harder, but you've been doing a swell job so far. Just keep it that way.

So now, wishing you the best of luck, I say, "Work now for us, as we work for you." For a while we'll be doing jobs that vary greatly, but when we return we'll be able to work together again.

— Bernie Petronis

School Days Are Here Again For '105'

Yes, we all have again begun from the beginning, and I do mean A, B, C, . . . etc. And therefore let me begin from the beginning.

It all started at our last membership get-together, when we took Mr. Zostautas' suggestion that since most of us do claim Lithuania as our origin, we should read and write, as well as "speak," our mother tongue.

Not only would we then be able to take part in Lith. plays, appreciate Lithuanian books and newspapers, but would also make our parents happier when, and if, we should have to leave home — as so many of us do nowadays. For then we could write letters in Lithuanian, and therefore be reasonably understood.

Mr. Janauskas speaks of this metaphorically thus, . . . when one knows how to waltz and polka, he should find it easier to do a rumba." Bad business for Madame Lazonga no doubt, but the point is that languages have no liabilities, and are therefore a very valuable asset.

It has also been suggested that in time we should study Lithuania's romantic historical past and very checkered present of which we know so very little.

All this and lots of fun, too, takes place on Tuesdays at 8.00 p. m., under the guidance of Frank Sadosis' capable tutoring. Frank himself left the shores of Lithuania only a few short years ago, having graduated from the Lith. equivalent of a Canadian College.

Won't you join us for an hour's interesting, educational, and enjoyable study?

We Bear the Burden And Pass the Buck

OR ELECTIONS OF 105 (2nd Term)

'Twas one bright day in early fall at 160 Claremont St. — 'pon a Sunday 'twas, that we gathered thither to discuss various affairs.

At which no less than a goodly number of members partook. Some arriving a bit late — whereupon quoth candid John:

"Zounds, 'twas called for one!"

But to forth the news! My heart's not in it nevertheless, being a bit flustered by late, for which this day and past I've taken myself to bed.

Firstly we had summoned Joe Murauskas forth to take upon himself that estimable post of presidency.

"How now," cried he, "have not I served you well as Treasurer?"

Seemed with sadness he greeted his promotion, so that we wondered why!?

Rene betook herself the second term as Secretary still. 'Twas very well, so everyone agreed! Whereupon may I remark that she's a most remarkable person — and so all again will agree to be sure.

The sun was warm and bright, so we like flies then buzzed away, however with a sigh. But seeming to hear a cry for order — so back to business still at hand.

Songs first introduced to them by Adams and Killer. The songs are all full of nonsense but a novelty, especially the one where Vic tries to reach his neck-tie with his tongue. Don't ask me how he does it, because no one else can.

After the sing-song came more dancing, both modern and old time; and before we all knew it, it was time to be heading for home. But wait a second before you all go. Here's a reminder that choir practice will be held every Tuesday, 8.30 p.m. sharp, at 01234 Charlevoix St., Point St. Charles Hall. So, members and those not yet members, don't fail to show up. It's a lot of fun.

— Janet

Thereupon Emily Sasnauskas was loath to take upon herself the burdensome holding of the treasury funds. Methinks that women are entirely capable of controlling purse strings; more so Emily. Entirely satisfactory!

We do at this time select an Entertainment Committee, as follows:

Bertha Janko, Arthur Kaptainis, Vera Thomas, Jennie Savickas.

Comes to mind a disturbing thought that 'tis they that commit much labour so we may have pleasure of which they are too busy to partake; and quickly maketh I an effort herewith to voice our thankful praises towards this committee.

Forsooth, we did at this point also elect a Sports Committee, to take upon themselves the arranging of our Winter Season's Outings.

To not forget the names of aforesaid committee, they be: Joe Petchkaitis and Stella Pazero.

Thus we come upon a committee detailed to take after our theatrical interests, namely "the Junior Members of the Theatre Group." Bertha Janko and Frank Sadosis donating their willing services to this cause.

And so to more frivolous acquisitions, such as librarian and reporter. These duly suggested to and accepted by Lily Sarapas.

So greatly cheered, the congregation delightfully jovial refused to be dismayed by worldly cares and woes, scattered gaily back to their respective Sunday haunts; for 'twas STILL early afternoon.

Montreal Bowling News

Our first bowling night was on Oct. 2nd at the Papineau Bowling Hall. Everyone showed up, and, to tell you the truth everybody enjoyed himself.

We picked two teams, eight persons on each. The first team called themselves the "Never Was's," and the other the "Has Been's." The first game went to the Has Been's. They were Vic K., Ben S., Steffie M., Janet K., Johnny A., and a couple of Polish lads.

Our team, the "Never Was's," consisted of Butch (Vera T., to you), Johnny M., Helen P., Joe V., Stan, Albert, Vic A., and Helen A. We had to give Johnny Morris credit for the first game.

On the second game we finally all agreed to bet a nickel. The losing team had to give a nickel each to the Club's Bank — the Barrel as we call it. Then the fun really started, and both teams rolled hard to win.

Everytime it was Butch's turn to play everybody would shout "Hey Butch, you're next!" To which she always replied "what, again?" Helen P. she rolls the ball and turns around right away to pick up the next. She never looks to see how many pins she knocks down. Janet K. could never

The girl with the wine pyjamas has aroused my curiosity by claiming that whatever is in the said pyjamas is much nicer than the pyjamas themselves. Please elaborate, tiny, cute, and dumbfounding!

I just want to tell you all that a girl like Helen Petronis is nice and true, and unreasonable.

Tell me, my little friend, why is it that Ben always has his wandering arms around Butch?

Who was that handsome gentleman that took the bee-oo-tiful blonde for a bike ride? No, it couldn't have been Ben — he's allergic to blondes (????!).

What fellow writes that the weather where he is is hot, but nothing compared to that of Montreal. Which girl is responsible for the heat wave? Could she be J., and the fellow T.?

— O —

Who's that super Casanova that's been occupying so much of Donna's time? We don't see her around much anymore. Don't be afraid to show us your heart-throb, we'll find out sooner or later anyway, you know! So bring him around — or is the competition too great here?

— O —

Can Killer no longer live up to his name, and is slipping in his technique? He takes a pick-up home from a dance and requires only ten minutes for a round-trip. Or could it be that he's that fast?

— O —

Overheard on the streetcar going home from Mickey's shower:

First R.C.A.F.er: "My, what a bunch of pretty girls, and all ten good looking."

Second ditto: "Yeah, they are pretty alright. But did you ever see so many blondes, natural and otherwise, together? Those two brunettes are sure a delightful change."

Those two brunettes, folks, were Donna and Janet.

— O —

You were here at the meeting, the first one we had; You're here the second time, and that ain't bad. Benjamin Strimas, you old son-of-a-gun, why don't you join the club, and have lots of fun?

— O —

Why doesn't everyone show up earlier at the meetings? I get tired waiting. — Signed by "the one who's always late."

— O —

That's all folks.

The Gang.

Killer makes the gutter with the first ball, and the second always follows the first. Lay of the girls while you bowl, Killer; you know you can't do two things right at the same time.

When Joe V. (or Curly) bowls, he wants everyone to leave the room, so that he'd have room to throw the ball without maiming somebody. Well, that's only a few pointers about a few of our players. You'll be hearing more about them later on.

The second game was finally won by the Never Was's — that's Vic Adams' team. Believe it or not, the losers all paid their bets. Both teams were now even, having won one game each. About this time John Villgelis walked in and joined the Never Was's.

Everybody was on his toes now for the third game, and both teams were shouting like h . . . Johnny Adams started to go crazy. He made strike after strike, and finally finished off with 178. Not bad, Johnny; I'll see that you're on my team next time. I guess it was that

Interview Of the Month

In selecting Ed as the interviewee of this month, I was prepared to say that he was a cross-section, or an average member. But I take it all back. I wouldn't for the world have you thinking that we go around eating carrots and solving incomprehensible mathematical problems all over the place. Yes, my overawed friends, that is what Eddie calls his hobby.

Ed's other tastes run in quite normal channels, being Adventure: Stories, the colour red, Allan Ladd, and Fred Waring's music. His ambition is to be a Draughtsman. But it would not surprise me in the least to hear Ed Barnett hailed as the second Einstein. As for his opinion of '105' — well, I shall use my discretion and protect the club from adverse publicity by saying only that Eddie agrees it's a GOOD social club if you're not training to be a hermit. "Did I say that?" says Ed. He is also one of the few people who have the happy faculty of becoming completely absorbed in their work. And before I forget — may I insist that he DOES resemble Lawrence Olivier in facial features. At this time I shall leave Eddie frothing and fuming, wondering why I'm allowed to live so long!

A Bedtime Story

Once upon a time there lived a group of carefree lassies and lads who, for reasons best known to ourselves, we shall not name. One day they all decided they'd like to take a little evening jaunt out to "Hog's Hollow," the land of pink elephants and fastams. Tho' it was rather late in the season for such an expedition, with the sound of the tions, with the sound of "the nights are warm up there" still ringing in their ears, they piled into the car and whisked away in a cloud of dust.

On arriving at their destination, hot dogs, pop, and marshmallows were served thro' the courtesy of the Entertainment Committee. Following this, they proceeded to reveal their true personalities in a little game of forfeit, obviously enjoyed by all. A little after midnight (it says here) our heroes and heroines decided that bedtime had rolled around, and having been rudely awakened to the fact that someone had lied in saying the nights were warm, — off they rode homeward.

And so we say adieu to the ladies and gentlemen with the lust for adventure in their hearts — and conclude our story in the true fairy tale fashion; i. e., and they lived happily ever after.
